The Wrong Overcoat.

LENGTH, 385 FEET.

A young husband is going to a banquet of the "Batchelors Club." He arrives at the Club and proceeds to make merry with "the boys."

Mr. Getrich, accompanied by his wife and daughter come out of a department store heavily laden with bundles. Wife and daughter ask him to put their veil and gloves in his pocket, which he does. He then leaves them, also going to the Club.

Five hours later the young husband has accumulated a considerable "jag" and taking Mr. Getrich's overcoat by mistake, departs from the Club.

He gets home at last, and not wishing a lecture at 3 A. M., prepares to camp on the sofa. Wifey waited up for him, and while picking up his overcoat finds the gloves and veil of another woman.

Explanations are of no avail and she administers a sound tongue-thrashing which is interrupted by the arrival of Mr. Getrich who wants his overcoat and returns the other fellows. Joy now follows the heart-rending spectacle; the young husband and wife kiss and make up and every body is again happy.

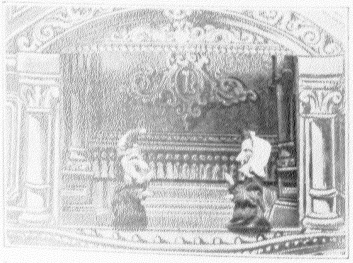
Willie's Party.

LENGTH, 450 FEET.

Willie invited his boy-and-girl-friends to a party. They all come. Willie presents each one with a Teddy Bear. He then treats them to a "Punch and Judy" show after which he shows them what tricks the Teddy Bears can do.



The boys and girls enjoy the show immensely. Willie is a real artist. He can make the Teddy Bears do anything but talk and we are not sure if he cannot do this also. After the show is over Willie invites his little friends to a lunch. You too are invited. Please do come.

Acrobatic Pills

LENGTH, 465 FEET.

Professor Dinkelspiel made a great discovery: "Acrobatic Pills." Whenever you throw the pills to the floor in the presence of a second party, this second party must do Acrobatic tricks.

The Professor uses these pills on every body he meets on the street, man or woman, and the effect is most surprising. When all the sufferers run after the Professor to give him a good thrashing, he takes his hand-satchel filled with the Acrobatic Pills and drops it on the street. The explosion causes all the people to perform Acrobatic feats during which time the Professor escapes.
